

CITIZENS START FUND TO CLEAN UP COOK COUNTY

VICTIMS GANG WARFARE LAID TO REST TODAY

And Civic Organizations Continue Attacks on Cook Prosecutor

Chicago, May 1—(AP)—William H. McSwiggin, youthful state's attorney with a record for obtaining death penalties, was laid to rest today while the police search for the slayers and the machine guns they used in killing him and two companions last Tuesday night remained non-productive of results.

Full church and military honors were accorded the "hanging prosecutor." Chicago officials and civic leaders putting aside until this afternoon the business of investigation, to pay final respects to the youth who at 26 had established a brilliant record. A military escort was provided because during the World War he was a lieutenant in the student reserve corps.

Others Are Buried

At the same time simple rites were held for James J. Doherty, saloon owner and gangster and Thomas Duffy, slain with McSwiggin when gangsters in another automobile poured a murderous fire from a machine gun into the machine they, with two others occupied.

Despite failure of the efforts of hundreds of officers to penetrate the mystery surrounding the triple slaying, the Chicago detective bureau, felt that it had the best clue yet found in the admission of Alex V. Korcek, young hardware dealer, that he knew the men who had purchased from him three machine guns.

After two days of almost constant questioning Korcek promised to identify today the purchasers of the lethal weapons, despite threats that he would be killed if he told.

Controversy Continues

The controversy between civic leaders and Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney, over the method of investigation of the triple assassination and conditions generally continued to rage today.

Harry Kelly, head of the non-partisan Union League Club of Chicago, stated that the special grand jury called yesterday by Crowe with himself as the official to present evidence did not "fill the bill." Nor did Mr. Crowe's action in calling in Oscar Carlstrom, state attorney general, meet with approval.

"A grand jury called on Crowe's own motion and under circumstances and conditions which will leave Crowe in the position of overpowering leadership will not be such a grand jury as will investigate Crowe's office or Crowe himself," Mr. Kelly said.

"I should advise Mr. Carlstrom either to take over the whole inquiry upon his own responsibility or to stay out of it entirely," Mr. Kelly said.

Judge Subpoenaed

Among the first witnesses subpoenaed for appearance this afternoon at the first evidence-taking session of the coroner's jury of six prominent business men, was Judge Brothers, acting chief justice of the criminal courts who granted Crowe's appeal for the special grand jury.

It was not indicated in advance just why the judge had been called. In dismissing the April grand jury today, Judge Brothers paid a tribute to McSwiggin.

"Men with the courage and fearlessness to deal with the present situation, regardless of whom the investigation hits, are the need now," the judge said.

"Taking away the life of a man—no, I will say a boy—whose life was sacrificed in the performance of his duty demands investigation and a strict accountability."

EVENING TELEGRAPH CARRIER ONLY EAGLE SCOUT IN TWO COUNTIES; PASSED GRADES

Winston Smith Winner Coveted Medals in Examinations

BULLETIN
Washington, May 1—(AP)—Walter W. Head, of Omaha, Neb., was elected president of the Boy Scouts of America at the Scouts convention here today.

Winston Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Smith, 625 North Galena ave., a valued and faithful carrier for The Evening Telegraph and a member of Troop No. 1 of Dixon Boy Scouts, has qualified in all the tests that are required to become an Eagle Scout, according to an announcement made by Don Cameron, Scout Executive of Blackhawk Council, comprising Lee and Ogle counties. Tributes to "Bud's" success are given by Rev. Fr. G. Carlton Story, a veteran in Scout work, who says the Dixon lad is the second Eagle Scout he has produced; by Mr. Cameron, and others who know him; and The Telegraph happily adds its congratulations. Mr. Cameron announced Dixon's only Eagle Scout as follows:

Winston Smith a Scout of Troop 1 in Dixon has qualified in all the tests that are required to become an Eagle Scout. The Eagle Scout rank is the highest in Scouting and any boy who reaches that rank can be very proud of the fact. This is the first boy under the Blackhawk Council Boy Scouts of America who has reached the rank of Eagle Scout.

In order to become an Eagle Scout a boy must pass twenty-one Merit Badges eleven of these are required and the other ten optional. The following Merit Badges were passed by Scout Winston Smith: First Aid, Life Saving, Personal Health, Public Health, Athletics, Pioneering, Cooking, Civics, Bird Study, Citizenship, Camping, Carpentry, Scholarship, Firemanship, Handicraft, Swimming, Conservation, Reptiles, Craftsmanship in Leather, Electricity, and First Aid to Animals.

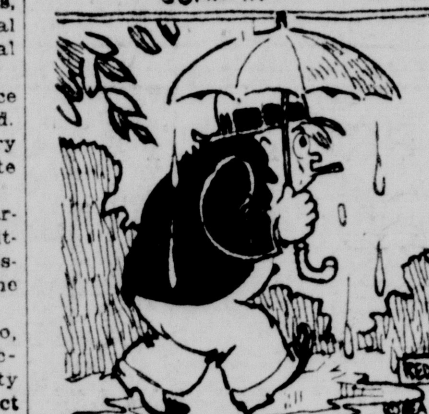

In passing this number of Merit Badges it has taken a great deal of work on the part of the boy. Badges are not easy to get and a boy who can accomplish this has done a great deal for himself.

Everyone in Dixon should be proud that we have a boy in our midst that has reached the rank of Eagle Scout. This lad has worked hard and faithfully to gain this rank. Let's have more Eagles during this coming year.

BRITAIN TAKES OVER CONTROL OF MINES IN STRIKE

State of Siege Exists After Miners Vote for Big Strike

London, May 1—(AP)—The government today proclaimed that "a state of emergency exists" in consequence of the coal strike. It thus assumes power granted by the throne to employ troops or take any other measures necessary to maintain order and insure the welfare of the population.

A general strike in support of the coal miners has been declared for next Tuesday. The decision was reached by a trades union conference here today.

The government today moved detachments of troops into the coal mining areas of South Wales, Lancashire and Scotland. The movement, characterized as "purely a precautionary measure," is to assist the police in maintaining order during the miners' strike.

The financial section of London viewed the outlook with concern as one aftermath of the coal stoppage might be the selling of securities on the stock exchange to meet expenses in other directions. The stock exchange was closed today and the effect on securities could not be immediately gauged.

"State of Emergency"

Great Britain is placed under what approaches a state of siege by the proclamation that "a state of emergency exists." While not a proclamation of martial law or a formal state of siege, it gives the government almost unlimited powers. The only limitation prescribed in the law under which the proclamation is that the government cannot declare industrial conscription or compulsory military service.

There is not much talk of employment of troops as the government is not inclined to stir the passions of the workers at this juncture. However it is reported some naval units have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness for special services.

A prolonged stoppage of coal production will have a tremendously adverse effect on other industries, especially steel and transport involving the loss of millions of pounds daily and heavily increasing unemployment.

Witnessed Killings

Joe E. Miller, C. V. Chapman, Otto Witzleb and Dr. George McGraham have returned home from an interesting trip to San Benito Valley, Texas. They were passengers on fast Chicago & Alton train leaving Springfield yesterday afternoon and witnessed the killing of three coal miners in a Ford car at a crossing, where two fast trains were passing. The south bound train struck the car, killing two of the men and terribly maiming the third. The third man had his head crushed and died a few minutes afterward. The Chicago bound train was stopped until the wreckage was cleared away and the bodies removed.

Circuit Arranged when Fair Representatives Hold Meet

Fair officers from Morrison, Amboy, Oregon and Peatonica were in Oregon, Ogle County, Thursday for the purpose of organizing a racing association comprising the Winnebago, Ogle, Lee and Whiteside Fair associations, and to arrange a program for the 1926 fair.

Among those present and voting were P. F. Boyd and M. E. Brubaker of Morrison, John Buckley, Gilbert Finch, A. W. Bosworth and A. W. Hoyle of Dixon, George F. Sumner and Clark Hulstead of Peatonica, F. W. Burchell, F. M. Thompson, Z. A. Landers, E. D. Landers and W. D. Mackay of Oregon.

Z. A. Landers acted as chairman of the meeting, and on motion of Mr. Burchell seconded by Mr. Boyd, a vote was taken by ballot to see what action would be taken, resulting in five for the Harness Horse association and eight for the American Trotting association. The rules of the latter will be adopted for 1926.

Bosworth President

On motion of E. D. Landers it was decided that the association of the fairs in the four counties mentioned above would be called the Northern Illinois Concrete Highway Circuit, also that a president, secretary and three directors, each with power to vote, be elected. The officers of the new association are: President, A. W. Bosworth, Dixon; Secretary, John Buckley, Amboy; directors, G. F. Sumner of Peatonica, P. F. Boyd of Morrison and E. D. Landers of Oregon.

The officers approved the following program for each of the fairs to be held this fall: 217 stake pace, purse $600; 220 stake trot, purse $600. Entrance fee to stake races, 3 per cent of purse ($18) payable as follows: 1 per cent on July 1, 1 per cent July 1 and 1 per cent Aug. 1. Conditions to enter, four to start, right reserved to declare race off in case of not filling. Heats 3 in 5, A. T. A. rules.

Dates for Meetings

Each association reserves the right to postpone or drop one class race, or to alter the program to suit their fair, and to arrange purses, in all class races except the three year old trot and pace, which are agreed upon for a purse of $150 each. Running races are optional.

The dates of the four fairs in the new circuit are as follows: Peatonica, Aug. 17 to 20; Amboy, Aug. 24 to 27; Morrison, Aug. 31 to Sept. 3; Oregon, Sept. 6 to 10.

The fair association in Oregon plans to erect a new hog house north of the present cow barns, which will be approximately 80 by 120 feet. The work will be started within a short time. It is to have a concrete floor and 120 pens. The fair officers will also convert the sales pavilion into a prize horse barn, with 55 stalls, making one of the finest set of buildings in the state for a county fair.

Doyle is on Job

The Clean-Rite cleaning establishment was continuing operations without a hitch today following yesterday's conflagration, which for a time, threatened the structure. Mr. Doyle, who sustained deep burns on the hands and arms, was at his duties today.

San Francisco, May 1—(AP)—Recent oil fires started by lightning have intensified efforts of oil companies to find some means of preventing such occurrences, officials of the Standard Oil Company of California, owner of the burning reservoir near Bakersfield said today.

WHILE CROWE IS SEEKING AID OF ATTY CARLSTROM

Coroner Says Prosecutor is Blocking Investigation

Chicago, May 1—(AP)—Alex V. Korcek, young hardware dealer of "The Valley" quarter, has become a central figure in the police investigation of the slaying of William McSwiggin, an assistant state's attorney.

Although fearful of paying with his life for any information he may give on gang and alcohol warfare, Korcek has admitted to the police that he knows the names of purchasers of three Thompson machine guns. Previously he had maintained that he had sold only one such weapon to unknown buyers.

It was with a gun of this type that McSwiggin, "the hanging prosecutor," James Doherty and Thomas Duffy, beer racketeers, were slain in Cicero Tuesday night.

Seek Supposed Companions

Search was continued today for Myles and William (Klondyke) O'Donnell, leaders of a beer running band of which the slain Doherty was a member. The two were believed to have been companions of the three slain men and may have been involved. Al Caponi, rival of the O'Donnells also is sought.

Investigation of the triple slaying and crime conditions in Cook county has stirred up a controversy over means and methods to be employed. While civic leaders were demanding a special grand jury investigation in charge of a special prosecutor, State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe yesterday obtained authorization from Judge Brothers for a special grand jury to be convened Monday.

Crowe Gets Carlstrom

Mr. Crowe enlisted the aid of Oscar Carlstrom, Attorney General, halting a proposed appeal by private citizens for the Attorney General to support a special grand jury and special prosecutor.

Oscar Wolff, political rival of Crowe, has issued a subpoena for Judge Brothers to appear at the inquest today but refused to tell the significance of the summons for the judge. The Cicero chief of police has allied himself with the coroner, claiming the State's Attorney has hampered the investigation by "brass band" tactics.

Harry Eugene Kelly, president of the Union League Club, who first suggested the special grand jury, was not satisfied with Mr. Crowe's move, asserting it precluded investigating the state's attorney's office. In contrast with Mr. Kelly's proposals, a banker has given $1,000 as the start of a $500,000 fund with which to go to the bottom of crime conditions in the county.

TELEGRAPH CARRIER ONLY EAGLE SCOUT IN COUNTY

Donnell Bennet, feature writer for the Chicago Tribune, had the following in his paper this morning:

Washington, D. C., April 30.—(Special)—"The greatest potential anti-crime asset our country has today."

That is what some of the most eminent legalists in America today said of the Boy Scouts when they heard Scout Master Judge James Church Cropley, Brooklyn, N. Y., former police commissioner of New York city and now on the Supreme bench of the state, give his testimony at the sixteenth annual convention of the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

"Of more than 100,000 boys brought before the criminal courts in Brooklyn in the last fifteen years, less than a dozen had ever been Boy Scouts and only two were Scouts at the time they got into trouble."

Not a Scout in Court
Then Tampa, Fla., testified that not one of the boys brought before the courts in that city in fifteen years had ever been a Boy Scout.

Testimony from New York City followed. It was: "Never in the last ten years has a Boy Scout appeared in the New York City Children's court, which deals with boys under sixteen years of age."

What they heard at the Scouts convention immensely cheered the legalists and anti-crime experts of the American Law Institute and the National Crime commission, who have been shaping policies, measures, and codifications to help their country, cope with crime.

See Solution in Scouts
"Perhaps," said they as they listened to the virile scout testimony, "while we have been discussing the solution of the crime problem, these Scout masters and fathers have found the solution—the far-reaching and enduring one."

The tributes to the Scouts came straight from the hearts of such leaders in American life as Chief Justice Taft, Charles Evans Hughes, Elihu Root, Newton D. Baker, Frank O. Lowden, and Herbert S. Hadley, who have been conspicuous in the current proceedings of either the law institute or the crime commission.

The legalists were especially interested in the brief, ringing statement of J. R. Marcum, Huntington, West Virginia, who told how the scouts in his city have jumped into court work and, without meddling, have done a great work of amelioration.

Watch Courts for Boys
"Always," Mr. Marcum said, "we have a scout counselor at the sessions of the juvenile court and the probation officer of that court is himself a scoutmaster. Immediately a boy is brought before the court he is offered a membership in the Boy Scouts and we have come his friends, advisers and in some cases his guardian. Our experience with boys thus taken in has been wonderful. Not one of them has ever been a repeater at court. Our plan has had a thorough test. It has been working for five years."

Scout Founder Attends
Sir Robert S. S. Baden-Powell, founder of the Boy Scouts and known as "chief scout of the world," came from England to open this convention of scout councilors, which President Coolidge will receive at the White House and address tomorrow.

"God knows," said Gen. Baden-Powell, "I am not much of an orator at any time," and then he gave to men who are troubled and apprehensive about crime conditions in this country these meaty thoughts on the Boy Scouts as a crime preventing agency.

"I do not know what your statistics are, but in our country we looked into the statistics of juvenile crime and we found that it began about the age of ten, and by the age of twelve the boy criminals were at their height. The numbers went down after twelve, and we realized that the character and propensity must be in course of formation perhaps at the age of eight or nine."

Job To Prevent Crime
"Well, our job is not to cure crime, but to prevent it. And if you are going to prevent it you have got to begin at the very beginning. Therefore we took the age of 8 as being the age at which to get hold of the boy and gradually train him up by a progressive course, beginning with the youngsters from 8 to 12 and then going on with a different kind of training adapted to his psychology from 12 to 17, and then we have gone on with the rovers, the senior scouts, to 17-21."

"In other words, brother scouters, catch the boy at 8 and when he is 18 he will not depart from you."

The Lee Center items in the Amboy News carried the following article which is of interest to Dixon friends:

The party given by the Oddfellows and Rebekahs last Friday night in honor of Jennie Myrtle Oakes and her fiancé Earl Suter, was a delightful social event. Credit for its success is due to the noble grand, Mrs. Bertha Lyman and the committees who planned every detail so carefully. Mrs. Lyman informed Miss Oakes that she was about to present her with a gift which she must always cherish and give the best of care. Unsuspectingly, she was led to the gift which proved to be Mr. Suter, whose presence at the party was a complete surprise to her. This added much to the merriment of the occasion but Miss Oakes never lost her poise or presence of mind and greeted him quite naturally. An appropriate program of music and readings was then rendered. After a period of social conversation, the guests adjourned to the banquet hall where the tables were resplendent with the Rebekah colors of pink and green and a delicious repast was served. Mrs. Lippincott had charge of the decorations. As a recompense for the many times Miss Oakes has served as musician for the lodge, she was presented with a fine electric toaster on which she has promised to make toast for Oddfellows and Rebekahs only. There were over 60 present.

Wed at St. Mary's Cathedral Wednesday

Leo Raymond Wolf, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Wolf of Dixon and Miss Rena A. Gaylor of Rockford, were united in marriage Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Cathedral in Rockford. It was a beautiful wedding, largely attended by relatives and friends of the young couple.

Reverend Father Joseph Lonergan officiated at the impressive ceremony, the young couple being married with nuptial high mass, the choir of St. Mary's cathedral furnishing the music. The bride was beautifully gowned in white georgette over ivory satin. She wore a graceful veil caught to her head with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried bride's roses.

The bride and bridegroom were attended by Mr. and Mrs. James Wolf, brother and sister-in-law of the bridegroom. The matron of honor was prettily attired in poudre blue, with hat matching. She carried sweet peas.

At the conclusion of the ceremony a reception and wedding breakfast were given at the home of the bride which was attended by relatives and friends.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Wolf are popular and highly estimable young people with hosts of friends who join in wishing them every happiness. They will make their home for the present on the Frank Scholl farm west of town. Their popularity was attested in the many handsome wedding gifts received.

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—

Stewed prunes, cereal, thin cream, poached eggs on graham toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—

Cream of tomato soup, croutons, cross sandwiches, drop molasses cookies, milk, tea.

Dinner—

Hamburg roast, baked potatoes, creamed cauliflower, asparagus salad, fresh strawberry pudding, whole wheat bread, milk, coffee.

Try sweetening your breakfast cereal with fresh maple syrup instead of sugar. Strawberries are delicious served with maple syrup, too. In fact the taste of maple blends perfectly wherever plain sugar is used, and is a delightful change.

Cross sandwiches are rather out of the ordinary. Any kind of crisp "green" can be substituted for the cross. Tender dandelion greens are particularly good.

Cross Sandwiches.
One cup minced cross, 2 tablespoons minced pimiento, ½ cup cottage cheese, 4 tablespoons finely chopped pecans or English walnuts, salt, paprika, mayonnaise.

The cross must be well crisped and thoroughly dried before mincing. Combine nuts, pimiento, cross and cottage cheese. Add mayonnaise to make moist and add salt and pepper to taste. This mixture must be tasted because the seasoning and the amount of mayonnaise used will determine the amount of salt needed in the mixture.
Spread on thin slices of buttered whole wheat bread, cover with a second slice of buttered bread and cut in triangles.

Life's meanings complicate and wide—
Life's meanings complicate and wide into a narrow compass come
As we approach the sea whose solemn tide
Must bear us home.

A bleak-blown stretch before our eyes,
Some sterile rods of bleak-blown shore,
And we must leave familiar lands
and skies Forevermore.

Earth, with your countless gentle ways,
Sky, with your limitless desire,
Take of us tenderest love, sincerest praise,
Ere we retire.

Life, with your meanings, complicate,
Your sorrow and your blitheness
both,
How are we vain to prove our untired
fate,
How are we loth!

"REMEMBER THE MAINE."

In referring to the fact that the battleship Maine was destroyed in Havana harbor twenty-eight years ago last February 18th, Robert Nelson Stanfield writing in the New Age has adopted a vivid portrayal of the battle of Manila, where the warships of Germany and Great Britain were hovering near, not entirely disinterested spectators.

Probably for diplomatic reasons the full import of the gathering in the gallery of the sea for observance of this assault on Manila bay was not given to the public at the time. Not until the late World war did officials relate what is purported to have taken place on that occasion. In common language it was that the British commander said in sea language to the German commander that if he made a move toward the fleet of the United States he would blow him out of the ocean. That settled that, and Dewey sailed in.

The writer condenses into convenient space the events of the war against Spain, the war in which there were so many volunteers that the military authorities were compelled to turn them back, the war that was fought by volunteers. In the following manner Mr. Stanfield recalls events of 1898.

"One could recall why the Maine was in Havana harbor on a peaceful mission; why congress gave the President 50 millions; how the war began; how Admiral Dewey spent his May day; how the Spanish fleet was bottled up at Santiago; how the marines held the beach at Guantanamo; why the boys cheered at Daiquiri; how they cleared the jungle at Guasimas; how they broke the line at El Caney and stormed the hill of San Juan; how they surprised the governor of Guam; how our flag floated over Porto Rico; how the fleets of neutral nations, as related by Brooks in his Story of Our War With Spain, had been 'ordered from the zone of danger and far down the bay, toward Corregidor, lay the German and Spanish warships, eight keels in all; but, close against the American right, the three warships of England ranked themselves, a warning, a protest, a barrier, if occasion arose, against any hostile movement on the part of the French or German fleet. England had decided against Spain, against all Europe, if need be, and ranged her fleet side by side with that of her 'kin beyond the sea,' as Gladstone called Americans. And as Dewey's battle line swept across the bay toward Manila that famous Saturday morning, August 13, the British flagship Immortal steamed from her berth with her men manning the rigging, her officers drawn up at salute, her splendid band stationed on the quarterdeck. Right alongside the American flagship she steamed, and as she passed the Olympia, her band struck up the Star Spangled Banner. Then her men and officers cheered in salute, and as the Olympia signalled the fleet to 'break out the battle flags,' and the Stars and Stripes streamed from every masthead, again the British band played. See! The Conquering Hero Comes, again the British sailors cheered in salute and God-speed, and with friendly echoes still ringing in their ears the Yankee jacks sailed on to their last battle with Spain in the war of '98.' And then, finally, one could recall how ended what President McKinley called 'our extraordinary war with Spain.'"

TRYING TO PUZZLE US?

King George, groping his way through an exhibition of futuristic paintings by Canadian artists, paused before one of the works to ask: "Is it a dog or a fish?"

Oh, no, Your Majesty! It was not a dog and it was not a fish. It might have been moonlight playing over the roofs of a boiler factory, or it might have been an oval pool out for a walk with its grandmother. Again it could have been the painter's concept of what a man saw on his way home from the bedside of a sick friend. It might have been even an Easter hat.

But it was never a dog or fish, Your Majesty. We're surprised at you.

There's a modern school of writers, too, that occasionally produces something very quaint. The best part of it is, those who call themselves critics of such effusions are often fooled by the stuff themselves.

For instance, Joe Shipley's book, "King John." A young school teacher out west, attracted to the work by critic's praise of it, did a little investigating and found it just a plain hoax. She demonstrated how Mr. Shipley simply had taken a poem, written it backwards, added a few inscriptions from statues and a bulletin of the Metropolitan Museum of Art (all backwards) and called the whole thing "King John."

It must have given Shipley a great laugh when the reviewers declared him a hero for his illustrious effort.

A Chicago boy crawls out to the perilous edge of the ice in Lake Michigan to rescue a comrade and holds his head above water until help comes.

A New York policeman hangs to the bridle of a runaway milk-wagon horse, is tramped upon, but halts the runaway.

Another New York policeman leaps into the icy river to save a carpenter who fell from a bridge where he was at work.

There are still a few left who will take dares.

After scrubbing the front porch put out a "smallpox" sign so people won't track it all up.

Failing to pay your grocery bill will keep you from eating too heavily during the coming warm spell.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

TINGALING AND THE TWINS FIND A TREASURE

Suddenly Nick whispered "Sh, I think I hear voices."

Yes, sir. Whoever Oofy Goofty was he had taken the pocketbook and the rent book and the pencil and departed.

And, although Mister Tingaling and the Twins saw queer little footmarks on the grounds, they were afraid to follow them because the last letter had said, "If you follow me your hair will turn green."

And nobody—not even a fairy landlord—wants to have green hair.

"And here I thought I was going to make my fortune," wailed poor Mister Tingaling. "Instead of that I haven't a penny. The thirty-second day of the month is over and all my rent money is stolen."

"It's just a shame," said kind Nancy. "Now you can't get a new spring hat or a new spring coat or anything, can you?"

"No, and my wife cannot get anything either," said the fairymen sadly.

Suddenly Nick whispered, "Sh, I think I hear voices. It sounds exactly like the Gazookums and Snitcher Snatch."

They listened carefully and then Mister Tingaling whispered, "Yes, sir, it's those little rascals as sure as anything. And they are right over there behind that big log. Let's tip-toe a little nearer. I'd just like to see what they are up to now, so I would."

So the fairy landlord and the Twins went along like little mice, until they came to the log.

Then very slowly and carefully they peeped over.

And, MY DEARS!

WHAT a sight met their eyes!

Snitcher Snatch and the three bad Gazookums were sitting around a heap of something on the ground.

And the heap of something was MONEY! Fairy money!

Snitcher Snatch was emptying the big pocketbook on the pile and he was saying, "Yes, my dear Gookies, I told them my name was 'Oofy Goofty' and if they followed me their hair would turn green. They'll never find us now. And every bit of money we find we will add to our treasure, and some day we'll be the richest people in the whole!"

But at that minute Nancy leaned over the log too far, and she fell—pop! Right on top of the money pile. "Oh, dear!" she thought. "Now I've gone and done it! What do you suppose will happen next?"

But I'll tell you what happened next. The Fairy Queen appeared suddenly on top of a bush. And she called out in a clear voice, "Snitcher Snatch, and you naughty little Gazookums! Aren't you all ashamed of yourselves! It's just dreadful the way you have been cheating and tricking this nice, dear kind, little fairymen. I've been watching every thing—I and my other fairies!"

"I let you do the things you did, just because I intended to make you give it all back. Now go home and after this let my friends alone. Mister Tingaling, here is your fortune. Gather it all up and put it into your big pocketbook and take it home. You and Mrs. Tingaling can buy all the spring hats you want now."

"Hurrah!" cried the Twins dancing for joy, while Mister Tingaling tried to thank the Fairy Queen.

They danced so hard their magic shoes came off. And in an instant Mister Tingaling and the Fairy Queen and Snitcher Snatch and the Gazookums had disappeared.

A STORY OF A GIRL OF TODAY

A PROMISE BROKEN

"That's the nicest thing I've had said to me today," said Jerry Hathaway when I exclaimed that I was so very glad to see him. "What are you doing here and why are you trembling? Has my father been trying to browbeat you?"

At this, I am ashamed to say I forgot all about what I had promised his father and answered eagerly: "No, he's been lovely to me." And then I stopped, for I knew he would wonder why I had been to see his father. However, I rushed along:

"But, Jerry, I just met that man Sellers in the hall and he said to me in a threatening tone of voice, 'Watch your step, girl, watch your step,' and it frightened me almost to death."

I had not realized that I had called the man still holding my hand "Jerry" until I heard him say: "Don't you worry about him, Judy. I'm just going up to Dad's office now to settle his case for him. I've known for a long time that many irregular things have been going on at the Beaux Arts and this will give me a chance for an investigation. I'm glad you went to see Dad, but I might have known you'd always do the right thing. I'm sorry though that Sellers saw you in the hall, Judy. He will think that it's you that's made all the eruption."

"You told Dad all about losing your money, didn't you? I was just going to tell him myself."

"Jerry, I'm awfully ashamed, but when I got that bag this morning, I thought you were taking the easiest way out of things and had sent me the money and bag yourself and that you didn't intend to do anything more about it. Of course I didn't want to accept the money and bag from you so I went to your father with the whole story, for I knew I could not get the right of it from anyone else."

"Of course I sent the money and bag to you, my dear girl, and a lot of fun I had picking it out. That part of it was mine. But I intend to get all the money I paid out and sent you, from those thieves."

I smiled.

"Then I expect they'll get what's coming to them, for your father said he was going to do the same thing, in almost the same words."

"Good for Dad. He's a little piece of all right even if he doesn't always approve of me, isn't he?"

The party given by the Odd Fellows and Rebekahs last Friday night in honor of Miss Jennie Myrtle Oakes and her fiancé, Earl Suter was a delightful social event.

Credit for its success was due to the noble grand, Mrs. Bertha Lyman and the committee who planned every detail so carefully. Mrs. Lyman informed Miss Oakes that she was about to present her with a gift which she must cherish and give the best of care. Unsuspecting she was led to the gift which proved to be Mr. Suter, whose presence at the party was a complete surprise to her. This added much to the merriment of the occasion but Miss Oakes never lost her poise or presence of mind, and greeted him quite naturally. An appropriate program of music and readings was then rendered following which Miss Oakes invited all to come and meet Mr. Suter. After a period of social conversation, the guests adjourned to the banquet hall, where the tables were resplendent with the Rebekah colors of pink and green and a delicious repast was served. Mrs. Lippincott had charge of the decorations. As a recompense for the many times Miss Oakes has served as musician for the lodge she was presented with a fine electric toaster on which she has promised to make toast for Odd Fellows and Rebekahs only. There were over 60 present with a number from a distance including Mrs. Arthur Tuttle of Morris, Mrs. Arthur Purdy of Maywood and Mrs. C. B. Atkins of Aurora.

THE VERY IDEA

OLD STUFF

Vacation time is drawin' nigh—the time, of course, when you and I are plannin' on a rest. We pick the week, the fit our plan and then a flock of pamphlets scan to find the place that's best.

We press our outing clothes and such and pack a trunk with much too much. And then we're set to go. A headline train's the one we take to chug up to some far off lake, where summer breezes blow.

Right on the bank, a cottage fit, is just the place to loaf a bit. What more could one desire? Of course of home there's not a trace. Just dampness all around the place. We have to build a fire.

The "running water" doesn't run. The old stove's anything but fun. The mattresses 'er hard. The front door has a busted lock. The lights go out at ten o'clock. All boisterousness is barred.

Vacation comes but once a year and every time the spell is here we meet the same old fate. With every trace of comfort shy, it always makes me wonder why, we call vacation "great."

The hurdy-gurdy man's job is a daily grind, in which one good turn deserves another.

The rural school commencement exercises held in the Methodist church last night was one of the best we have ever been permitted to attend. The program was excellent, each number of it being rendered with vim and an aim to please. The reading by Mrs. Ira Hotchkiss is worthy of special mention. Mrs. Hotchkiss is a reader of rare ability which was proven last night when she read Lincoln's Address at Gettysburg. Atty. M. J. Gannon of Dixon gave the address of the evening which was one of the best that has been given here in years. Though short it was full of helpful thoughts to not only the young but the older ones as well. The presentation of diplomas by Supt. L. W. Miller always has something good to say, always has good advice to give to the graduating class, and has a very nice way of presenting the diplomas. The class motto—"Success Means Effort." Definite announcement was made Wednesday by Nathan A. Petrie, our veteran banker that he had donated the property recently purchased from Geo. E. It would appear that the entire plot of ground should be used for building in order that ample space may be had for landscaping, providing for paths, fountains and shrubbery. No doubt Mr. Petrie will endow the institution with sufficient funds to guarantee perpetual upkeep or it will become a burden on the tax payers of the community as time goes on and instead of the gift being a benefaction to future posterity it will be looked upon as a needless expense, for everyone in the village knows that taxes should be decreased instead of increased.

BATSMEN STAGED UPRISING LAST DAY OF APRIL

Heavy Bombardment of Pitchers Marked League Games

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

April ended in a tremendous upsurge of the batmen of the major baseball leagues, the National showing an average of twelve hits and seven runs for each team.

The champion Pittsburgh Pirates, who have suffered much in the early season again staged a desperate onslaught and buried the Cincinnati Reds, 13-4 with Glenn Wright smashing out two home runs. May, Day, Finch and Mays attempted to stop the Pirates.

Another slugging battle was staged by the Cubs and Cardinals, the Chicagoans obtaining the decision, 10-9. Thirty-one safe hits were made, Blades of the Cardinals recording a home run.

Boston's Braves downed the New York Giants in a ten inning fray, 5-4. Shortstop Jackson of the Giants made three misplays and there were two errors by his teammates.

Burling Grimes hurled winning ball for Brooklyn and the Dodgers set up their fifth straight victory of the week 8-4, Philadelphia being the victim. Cox and Wheat hit homers, while Mareville hit a triple, double and single in four times at bat.

Babe Got Homer

The American League champion Senators fell again before the bats of the New York Yankees, 7-2. Babe Ruth registered his fourth homer and Judge and Rice of the Senators also gathered four base blows.

Sammy Grey of the Athletics served the best ball of the day holding the Boston Red Sox to five hits and beating them, 5-2. Howard Ehmke, Boston pitcher and Al Simmons, Athletics' outfielder, nearly came to blows after Simmons was hit by a pitched ball. Team mates prevented fist-cuffs.

The Chicago White Sox gained their second straight victory over Cleveland, 3-2, with Lyons and Connolly leading the pitching. Smith made an exceptional bid for his game by driving across both of Cleveland's runs. Detroit and St. Louis staged a nip and tuck contest with the Tigers the winners, 7-6. Williams and Sisler hit some runs for the losers, but bunched hits for three runs in the first and again in the sixth gave the Tigers the edge.

SPORT BRIEFS

Sheriff Koller of Cleveland has announced there will be no spring or fall racing in this balliwick. He said he has "advised" proprietors of the five tracks that there has been too much racing. He predicted there will be none before July 1.

John Kilonis, Boston light heavy-weight wrestler, won two straight falls from Sam Clapham, Chicago, at Spokane, Washington.

Caid Haman Cheddi, 28, one of the tiffan delegates to the peace conference at Oujda Morocco, professed great admiration for Nurni, Hoff, Legendre and DeHart Hubbard.

Premature publicity given the proposed site of Tex Rickard's Madison Square Garden at Chicago may have killed the deal between Rickard and the Phipps estate of Pittsburgh. Prices were boosted.

Imported golf ball prices seem to be going up as the weather for the game improves. The average paid for 17,490 received in March was 40.8 cents as compared with 40.4 averaged for February and 38.3 for January. Practically all of the pellets imported during those three months the Commerce Department announces, come from Great Britain.

Nineteen of the foremost drivers of the auto racing world had their motors tuned to record breaking pitch today for their chase around a new mile and half board oval at Atlantic City, N. J. The race, a 300 mile test of speed for international honors and prize money aggregating $30,000, marks the opening of the $500,000 plant of the Atlantic City Motor speedway Association.

The Charlie Rosenberg-Bud Taylor antweight championship fight probably will be staged at one of the Chicago major league baseball parks.

Grade School Base Ball League Formed

Baseball for boys started last evening with a meeting of the older fellows who organized a school baseball league for this season. The plan as worked out will give each grade school one older boy who will act as manager for the team. He will pick out the best players and get them out for practice. These managers chosen in the meeting are: South Central, Arthur Teeter; North Central, H. Schertner and R. Reagan; St. Mary's, Ed O'Malley; E. C. Smith, J. Joyce. Members are now busy lining up the teams and will hold their next meeting next Wednesday evening.

The first game will be played next Friday and no person will be allowed to play in that game or any other during the season unless he has his name signed up at the Y. M. C. A. office two days prior to the game.

Boys are to be seen on nearly every vacant lot in the city, practicing for the baseball season.

Association Growing Throughout the World

The Y. M. C. A. movement is showing splendid increase both nationally and internationally, according to a report received by Secretary Hunt this morning. The net property and endowment holdings of Y. M. C. A.'s throughout the world, translated from Swiss gold francs into American dollars, total in value $193,236,000, of which amount approximately 80 per cent is in the United States alone, according to the annual statement of the World's Committee. At the beginning of 1926, the report shows, there were 7,352 employed officials, 151 more than a year ago. Of this number, 5,926 were employed by the American Association.

Ladies' Department is Proving popular

Now that warm weather seems to be assured, the Ladies' Department of the "Y" is needed more than ever. From now on the swimming pool will prove the most popular. This has been evidenced by the fact that the number of ladies working each Monday is showing an increase. The bowling alleys are open each Monday for all members.

Aside from these usual activities, this coming Monday the Girls' Hi-Y Club will entertain the Boys' Hi-Y Club at a banquet at 6:30, and in addition, a number of the ladies of the city are meeting for a scramble dinner at 1 o'clock, for the purpose of organizing a club for the study of Parliamentary Practice and Public Speaking. This will work on parallel lines with the Toastmaster's Club. Any lady in the city is eligible for membership in this new club.

MILDRED ELLEN SHAW (Contributed)

Mildred Ellen Shaw 12 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman M. Shaw, passed away about 12:30 o'clock Saturday morning losing her fight with death after an illness with measles which developed into pneumonia. She had been ill for about three weeks. Mildred was born at Shaw Station July 11, 1913, and passed away April 17, 1926, at the age of 12 years, 9 months and 6 days. She was a bright, lovable child, always faithfully fulfilling her duties at home and saving the welfare of her immediate family always at heart. At the age of seven she began her school career, having in her class three other playmates. This class has now reached the sixth grade and the passing of Mildred has broken the tie which has bound them together during their years of childhood acquaintances. Mildred was baptised in the Methodist church of Amboy on Children's day in June of last year by Rev. M. D. Bayly. She had been a faithful attendant in her Sunday school class as long as her health would permit. There were six children in the Shaw family and Mildred was the eldest, leaving at her passing, three brothers and two sisters, Egbert, Elmer, Howard, Collette and Mary Alice. Her father and mother and grand-parents also survive her, as well as countless friends in this vicinity and other relatives. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at the Methodist church with Rev. O. H. Diercks officiating. Interment was made in Woodside cemetery at Lee Center.

A precious one from us has gone, A voice we loved is still, A place is vacant in our home, Which never can be filled. God in his wisdom has recalled, The boon her life has given. And though the body slumbers here, The soul is safe in heaven.

Monday Morning

Start the Week Smiling with a Refreshing Breakfast of KELVINATED FOODS

After a summer Sunday—when Monday morning dawns sunny and hot—what do you find in your refrigerator to tempt breakfast appetites? What do you serve to start the week right?

Kelvinated foods just fairly coax mid-summer appetites. Coaxed from the cold, frosty air of a Kelvinator-chilled refrigerator they are irresistible.

Think of sliced oranges, served ice-cold; of canteloupe or grapefruit, chilled through and through; or of home-canned fruits, served cold in their rich juices. Think of the cream for your cereals cold and refreshing.

The delightful thing about Kelvinator Refrigeration is that it is just as frosty and cold after a week-end as at any other time. You need never worry about ice melting over Sunday. We can put Kelvinator in your own refrigerator. Phone or call.

An Opportunity!

Now—Today—down Florida's fertile West Coast, day and night gangs of workmen are laying the rails for one of the two, new, through main line Railroads. These railroads will connect the productive West Coast Agricultural Empire of Florida with the waiting Northern markets. They will shorten the distance to Southern Florida points 200 miles.

Nowhere else in this country is a new agricultural territory being opened up by new, through main-line railroad construction.

It was our good fortune to secure 100,000 acres of the productive, agricultural land, through which these new railroads will run. These 100,000 acres are now being syndicated on a most attractive basis.

Only 1250 people can participate in this Syndicate.

Each member of the Syndicate will receive outright a deed to 40 acres of this land, free and clear of all encumbrance. And each member of the Syndicate will share proportionately in the profits from the re-sale of the balance of this land.

It is seldom that the individual has an opportunity to acquire a small interest, such as an individual can afford, in a gigantic railroad construction, land movement on a wholesale price basis.

Profitable Farming 12 Months in the Year!

Here in Taylor County, Florida, crops are rotated throughout the entire year. The handicaps of northern farming are eliminated.

Here in Taylor County are some of the best lands in the State of Florida, well-drained by numerous rivers flowing into the Gulf, with a moderate equitable climate throughout the year.

The United States Department of Agriculture reports that the average value of farm products of Florida is $109.76 per acre, compared with a trifle over $12 in Iowa, $12 in Illinois and $13 in Ohio.

No wonder Southern Farming is claiming the earnest attention of the people right now.

It will cost you nothing to investigate this opportunity to secure for yourself 40 acres of this valuable farm land.

Why Girls Go Back Home

CATHARINE BRODY

Copyright 1926 by Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.

"Why Girls Go Back Home" with Patsy Ruth Miller is a Warner production from this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Marie Downey, a country girl as innocent as a puppy, thinks that because Clifford Dudley, an actor, loves her, they have the right to become engaged; and naively follows him to New York. Clifford schemes to get rid of the unsophisticated girl without unpleasant publicity, but just at this time, Marie, defending Clifford's reputation, informs her chorus mates she is his fiancée. This leads to the papers and is a bombshell to Clifford's backers, who plan to "frame" Marie to save Clifford. Saily, Marie's protector, is absent from the apartment.

With not too much alacrity, therefore, and with her kimono hanging loosely about her, she opened the door. Sam took in the sight of her in a glance and over her head. Then he smiled reassuringly. "Miss Downey?"

Bethinking herself of the loose kimono, Marie gathered it about her and nodded. A reporter, was her horrified first thought, soon dispelled, however.

"Mr. Dudley sent me over," explained Sam, "to tell you that he spoke to you about."

"Oh, isn't Mr. Dudley coming?" Sam had to smile at the acute collapse of all her hopes audible in her voice.

"Oh, yes," he went on confidently, and saw her smile again. "But he got stuck with a telephone call—business, you know, and since I'm in a hurry, he told me to go along first and wait for him if possible. I suppose you don't mind if I come in?"

"Oh, of course, do come in," said Marie, confused. She looked deprecatingly about the living room, thankful that she had made up the couch on which she slept and blushed at the untidy litter visible through the open bedroom door. She went quickly forward and shut it.

"May I sit down?" remarked Sam.

"Oh, yes, of course," cried Marie in further confusion. For some reason which the experienced Sam

"Go after him, Saily, if you're my friend. Oh, call him back."

By would have had no trouble in classifying, he made her conscious of the thinness of the kimono. She stood uncertainly by the bedroom door, torn between a desire to excuse herself and slip on a dress and a feeling that there was something immodest in such a performance with a stranger in the same apartment.

Sam flung his hat and came on another chair and settled himself blandly. He began:

"I suppose I might as well start to tell you what I have in mind," with a surprised and rather reproachful look which caused Marie to come forward a little, feeling that she had been remiss as a hostess. She still held herself, however, with an uncertain air, poised for flight, which did not escape Sam.

He drew out his cigarette case and held it out to her. She shook her head, startled. She had not yet become accustomed to the free and easy smoking of women, even of Saily. Sam put a cigarette in his own mouth and looked about him for a match.

"Oh, I think there are some on the table," she crossed to get the matches and ash tray. Sam forestalled her, but her movement brought them, as he had planned, closer together.

Just as he was about to put the match to his cigarette Marie was horrified by a sudden crumpling process in his body. The lighted match fell to the carpet and the man, clutching his side, seemed only by herculean control to keep himself from sinking to the ground after it. Marie, springing forward, lending him instinctive support. He pointed agonizedly to the match, which she put out with her foot, and made a desperate attempt to straighten up. This brought a great gasp of pain and a further bowing and curling up of his body.

"Heart attack," he mumbled through blue lips. Sam had been an actor, too, in his day. Like a blind man, he put out his hands and groped in the direction of the couch. Bending so heavily on Marie that she could hardly keep her balance, he staggered toward it and tumbled forward on his face. Marie repressed a scream. Her own face had gone white. She made a movement to run to the bedroom to call a doctor, to get help, at least go through the motions of getting help, but the fainting man grabbed her hand.

"Help—me—get coat off!" he managed to groan. Wordlessly they struggled with it. He lay for a moment, seemingly relieved and trying to compose himself, and clutched at his collar. With Marie's help they got that and his tie off and cast them on the floor. Breathing with more ease, he looked up at Marie.

"Shall I call a doctor?" said Marie faintly.

He shook his head.

"Wait. It passes—soon."

After a deep breath he mumbled pitifully. "Sorry—so much trouble."

"Oh, never mind about that. But I'm frightened. Shant I—don't you really think I should get a doctor?"

He appeared not to heed, and, clutching his breast again, besought, "A glass of water, brandy—be all right. So sorry."

She came back with a tumbler of brandy and a glass of water in each hand. He took the water, but trying to raise himself to a sitting posture his elbow jarred against the kimono, the couch cover and his shirt.

Then the untouched glass of water fell to the floor from his nerveless fingers and smashed. With one hand he caught hold of Marie's arm, drawing her down with all his strength to the couch as if in a paroxysm so much beyond his control that he clutched at her with the panicky strength of a drowning man.

He was seized with a gigantic fit of coughing. Marie opened her mouth in a cry for help. It was stifled by the man, who, suddenly, actively, grasped her close in his arms and closing her mouth with kisses, dragged her kimono off one shoulder.

Marie's agonized struggles were like the weak floundering of a hooked fish in his mighty clasp. The door opened, and a group of three, Clifford leading, filed in and stood silently watching.

The man, though his back was toward the door, at once loosed Marie and, turning around, pursed his lips, and his face took on an abashed and foolish look.

Marie made with a cry and a sob for Clifford. He grasped her bare arm and held her off, looking her coldly straight in the eye. Before Marie had a chance to say a word the blonde woman was upon her, slapping her face and weeping aloud with rage.

To the blonde woman the press agent now sprang and pulled her away from Marie. She began to shriek such accusations at Sam, her husband, as made Marie shake with cold fear and bewilderment. Then she turned and loosed a flow of filthy terms at Marie, who cringed and whined to the icy pallor of death. Her poor little voice beseeching Clifford was a wailing in that clamor. The press agent nudged the woman, and at once she fell silent with one final snarl.

Clifford spoke coldly, turning to her:

"Thank you, madam. It was kind of you to inform me."

To the man, now struggling into his coat, he made an ironic bow:

"I am so sorry we had to intrude."

All this time he held Marie at arm's length. Now he released her and with his best snarl looked her again in the eye.

"I never wish to see you or hear from you again."

He turned on his heel.

At this second the door opened and Saily stood on the threshold, taking in the whole group, and Clifford in especial, with a lift of her eyebrows.

Saily took one step out of the doorway.

"What the h— is this?"

Without deigning to answer the group filed by her silently, as they had come. Only Clifford turned to say, with a smile, "Ask your girl friend."

The man, Sam, grabbing his hat and cane, sneaked by Saily, clinging to his wife, who pushed aside his arm as a byplay for Saily's benefit. The door banged behind them.

"Clifford!" screamed Marie, throwing open the door. "Come back, oh, Clifford, let me explain!"

There was no answer. She was about to rush after him; but, becoming conscious of the disheveled kimono, she ran back and grabbed Saily.

"Go after him, Saily, if you're my friend. Oh, call him back."

Saily only shut the door, and, taking Marie in her arms, let her cry noisily, beseech and then fall to weeping more and more quietly.

ILLINOIS SCENE OF INVASION BY BIG ICE FIELDS

Geologist Gives Data on Early History to Scientists

Harrisburg, Ill., April 30.—(AP)—Illinois was the scene of four and probably five ice invasions in the centuries past. M. M. Leighton, chief of the Illinois State Geological survey told the Illinois Academy of Science here today.

"That at least appears probable," he said, "that at least four ice sheets invaded Illinois at intervals separated by long interglacial epochs during the Pleistocene period, and there is some evidence that there are as many as five different ice invasions. At least two of these reach close to the Ozark region of southern Illinois, so that most of the state is covered by glacial drift and its related materials, which have to be dealt with in many engineering projects.

"Engineering specialists in Illinois dealing with earth materials are seeking more and more detailed knowledge concerning Glacial Geology. The reasons are partly the fatal consequences of experience, partly increased engineering specialization and development and partly increased information concerning the glacial geology of the state.

"In the coal industry, the mining engineer must take into account the possible existence of pre-glacial valleys now buried by the drift, because of water troubles which may ensue in sinking of shafts, the discontinuity of coal beds due to pre-glacial erosion, and the possible disastrous flooding of mines if the entries are extended into the glacial fillings of the old valleys. Buried valleys or partially buried valleys are of great importance to the engineer who specializes in water supplies for villages and small cities in the central and southern parts of Illinois. The tracing of these valleys, which is now being undertaken by the State Geological Survey, assumes an economic importance.

"The reclamation of our surface water supplies is of importance from the municipal and industrial standpoint in some localities, and in the selection of a proper site for a durable dam and water-tight reservoir a knowledge of glacial geology is critical. Such problems abound not only in Illinois, but in many of the drift-covered states.

"Sand and gravel resources, now so important in our road building program, can best be surveyed by the practical minded glacialist who understands the principles of sedimentation in the building of glacial moraines and in the deposition of outwash materials. Perhaps the most recent new need of information concerning the glacial and related formations of Illinois is that of the Research Division of the State Highway Department, which is making a study of the bearing strength of various surficial materials which are used in fills as a sub-base for the road pavement."

THESE WOMEN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

HARRY MORTON, attractive to women, middle-aged, wealthy, unmarried, maintains a home in Rochester and an apartment in New York. His adopted daughter, AUDREY, loves him. So does NONA, a New York stage girl.

To learn how stage girls manage to attract Morton, Audrey hires a male dancing partner, who tries to extort $1000 from her. Morton confronts the man, who is called "Joe" and drives him away. Nona accepts Morton's proposal that she leave the show for which she is rehearsing, and be Audrey's dancing partner. With Morton and JOHN PARRISH, Morton's secretary (who is in love with Audrey) they go to a Russian tea room. Nona calls attention to the people at another table.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY (The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER XXX
A MOMENT or two later, Nona said: "Look now! Quick!"

Audrey looked, in the direction that Nona indicated. She saw a fat, heavy-faced man, sitting with a thin girl, who was lighting a cigarette.

"Who are they?" Audrey said, turning back to Nona. "I never saw them before."

"Why," Nona said, "I thought you met that girl. Anyway, she's the girl from whom Joe gets his money. Joe's the fellow who tried to hold you up for a thousand dollars."

With a sharp exclamation, Audrey turned and looked again. This time, the other girl's eyes were fixed on her, and there was a glint in them that was not to be mistaken. Audrey shivered.

"I believe that girl would stab me," she gasped. "But how does she know who I am?"

Morton had been watching the little drama. "Not so hard to guess," he said. "You are with me, and with Nona. She knows us, and she has found out from Joe that I am your guardian. It's like adding two and two."

Nona was arising. "Wait here a minute," she said.

She walked to where the girl and fat man were sitting, and in a moment was leaning over their table. The girl looked up at her, in cold hostility. Nona began a rapid speech, motioning toward Morton's table. The girl shook her head. Nona stooped down, and whispered to her. The fat man, after a moment's attempt to listen, philosophically poured himself a glass of liquor, and gulped it, with an emphatic smack of his lips.

Evidently Nona gained her point. With a few words of excuse to the portly man, the girl arose and followed Nona to Morton's table. Parrish arose, and offered his chair. The girl refused it.

"Nona says you've got some explanations to make, and I want them," the girl said. "I'm willing to listen to what you have to say."

"She's so-coo," Nona confessed to her companions. "But I brought her over anyway. Sit down!"

She pushed the girl into the chair, and herself sat down alongside. "She has the idea that Audrey is trying to take her Joe away from her!" she explained.

Parrish, who had brought another chair for himself, let out a quick exclamation. "That is an absolute outrage," he said.

"Keep quiet, Parrish," Morton ordered. Turning to the girl, he went on: "Did this young man of yours tell you that he had tried to extort a thousand dollars from Miss Morton?"

"It's a lie!" the girl cried. "She just tries to frame him! He wouldn't fall for her, and she was trying to get even."

Audrey was crushed. She buried her face in her open hands, and moaned: "This is terrible! It's awful!"

Morton touched her on the arm and again, addressed the girl.

"I see your point of view better than Miss Morton does, or Parrish here. No doubt Nona understands, though. You are very fond of this man, and believe that other women want him. You let him have your money, because you are attached to him, and want to believe what he says. Anybody that does anything against him, is your enemy, too. Is that right?"

"You said something!" the girl returned. Her hostile eyes still were inspecting Audrey.

"I think you will agree," Morton continued, "that I have been pretty good to you, in a way."

"Good!" There was a bitter sneer on the girl's lips. "You are going to meet people, no matter where we go. We can't wrap ourselves, or our daughters—or our secretaries—in cotton-wool, and expect to protect them that way from the world. Our only real protection is our own common sense."

"I would like to go away from here, though," said Audrey. "That girl over there, and the man with her, keep looking at me. Who do you suppose he is?"

"Oh, some mutt from out of town," Nona surmised. "She's being hostile this evening. He'll probably give her twenty dollars, for going out to dinner with him, and dancing with him afterward."

Morton paid for the tea that they had consumed, and told the waiter they would not want the borsch that he was placing before them.

"Let's go to a theater, and find something to laugh about," Morton proposed, as his party filed up to the street level from the restaurant.

"Let's not," Audrey protested

ly, "we are going to meet people, no matter where we go. We can't wrap ourselves, or our daughters—or our secretaries—in cotton-wool, and expect to protect them that way from the world. Our only real protection is our own common sense."

"I'm afraid I'm too busy," Audrey said. "Nona and I are working every afternoon, and I get so tired I don't think I can play."

Parrish's face fell. "I just thought it might amuse you," he said. Audrey compressed her lips, and was about to make a retort, but Morton interrupted. "Suppose you sing," he proposed. "And I'll play for you."

He looked significantly at Nona, and smiled. Nona herself was surveying Parrish, speculatively. "I'd love to hear Miss Morton sing," she said.

They gave their wraps to the servant, and Morton, rubbing his wrists and flexing his fingers, to limber up, and shook Nona's hand from his arm.

"I have a golf suit, now," he said. "Would you like to play tomorrow, before you rehearse?"

"Is it necessary to have a special suit to play golf in?" she asked, innocently.

Morton laughed. "That's my fault," he said. "I suggested that he get those clothes, and he has been waiting for his first golf game until the knickerbockers were ready. Can you show him how to hold the clubs?"
